There are different costs associated with different types of securities and investors may be responsible for paying fees separate and distinct from those paid to Pacific Edge to invest in such securities. Importantly, the fees specific to what Pacific Edge charges do not include certain fees and charges imposed by third parties such as custodial fees, mutual fund fees and expenses, and additional fees charged by wrap sponsors. Pacific Edge's clients' assets can also be subject to asset-based transaction fees, brokerage fees and commissions, retirement plan administration fees (if applicable), deferred sales charges on mutual funds, 12b-1 fees, odd-lot differentials, transfer taxes, wire transfer and electronic fund fees, and other fees and taxes on custodial accounts and securities transactions. For mutual fund and exchange traded fund ("ETFs") investments, investors are charged internal management fees, distribution fees and other expenses, which are described in each fund's prospectus.

All custodial fees and any other charges, fees and commissions incurred in connection with transactions for a Pacific Edge client's account are generally paid out of the assets in their managed account and are in addition to the investment management fees charged by Pacific Edge. Notably, neither Pacific Edge nor any of its associated persons receive any portion of the third-party fees. Investors should consider all fees that may be charged to their account and also understand that lower fees for comparable services may be available from other investment advisory firms.

"Low-cost" refers to Pacific Edge's management fees and transaction costs, and does not include the cost of custody, wrap fees, or custodial fees.
